Barking Dog Problems

Why Dogs Bark

- Boredom. Some dogs have pent-up energy and bark simply because they are bored. This dog needs regular aerobic exercise and plenty of toys.
- Loneliness. Dogs are social animals and require daily attention. By barking, this dog is requesting attention and when you scold him you give him what he needs. In this way, scolding encourages barking. Instead, give this dog positive attention by making him or her part of the family inside the house.
- Restrictions On Freedom. A dog on a chain or in a small area will relieve his tension by barking.
- Protective Tendencies. This is natural, desirable barking. However, a dog should be trained to alert owners of an intruder and then stop barking.
- Food, Water or Shelter. Some dogs bark when they are hungry, thirsty, or want to get out of the elements. Making sure they always have access to food, water and shelter can help reduce the tendency to bark.

Solutions

- Bring the dog inside the house, a garage, or other safe enclosure.
- Make sure the dog's needs for food, water, warmth, exercise, and attention are met. A barking dog is usually asking for something.
- Alleviate the underlying cause!
- Bark collars can help, but they only help treat the symptoms, not the problem, and other symptoms like aggression and destructive behavior will emerge.
- Enroll in obedience classes. Teach the dog "Speak" and "Quiet" then teach your neighbors to use "Quiet."

Outside Dogs

- Dogs are social, pack animals. When left alone, they will display frustration-relieving and attention-getting behaviors such as barking, digging, and chewing.
- Outside dogs especially need an owner's attention. Walks, playing fetch, games, obedience classes, and "hanging-out" outside will help. Find ways to include your dog in more of your family activities.
